We confirm that the above course is recognised as a training programme by The Irish Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (IACP) and meets the following criteria:

1. 450 student/faculty contact hours.
2. 100 hours of client work.
3. 50 hours of personal therapy completed by students.
4. Selection procedure for applicants at intake stage.
5. Students are assessed throughout the training course.
6. Two of our core staff are IACP accredited and at supervisory level. All our faculty staff are IACP accredited.
7. This course aims to merge the successful and well-established cognitive-behavioural model of Choice Theory/Reality Therapy/Lead Management with the Person Centred Counselling philosophy and the newer Multicultural Counselling and Therapy approach. This particular combination is chosen to assist counsellors in understanding present-day counselling and psychotherapy from a practical culture-centred perspective, while simultaneously including traditional individual approaches to the field.
8. The course has a balance of theoretical material, personal development, skills training and supervised client work.

In addition the course modules include the following: Counselling Microskills; Domestic Violence; Relationship Counselling; Sexual Abuse; The Resilient Learner: A Mental Health Approach to Adult Education and Lifelong Learning; Developmental Psychology: Abnormal Psychology; Spirituality and Counselling; Motivation and Happiness in the Counselling Process; Art Empowerment in the Community; Counselling in the Workplace; Specialist Seminars.
